It was a significant day for the Catholic Church, as it was the first time in the history of the Nation that the President of the United States had attended services in a Catholic Church on a heliday which had been set apart by Presidential proclamation. The civic and patriotic significance attached to the ceremony was shown by the decora-tions of the pew occupied by President Taft and each pew section reserved for the representatives of pan-American countries, which was designated by tiny flags and shields of the representative's country. Encircling the tall marble columns the vari-colored flags of 20 Nations the vari-colored flags of 20 Nations hung side by side with the Stars and Stripes, while large flags of the Red, White and Blue, suspended across the gallery, were held in place by the Stars and Stripes. This is probably the first time in the history of the Roman Catholic Church that decoration of this character has been permit ion of this character has been permitted within its sacred precincts. It is only a few years back when a Grand Army veteran, who was a member of the Catholic Church, was refused the solemn functions of the dead within the sanctuary of the church until the Figg, which had been wrapped about the casket by his Grand Army com-rades, had been removed, and the fact that not only the Stars and Stripes and the flags of the South American Nations are now permitted to decorate the in-terior of the Roman Catholic Church as well as the interior of nearly every other church, goes far to show the spread of patriotism thruout the land.
